DE PUERTO RICO

ANNUAL REPORT 2017 2018

Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico (FCPR) dedicates this 2017-2018 annual report to the nonprofit organizations that kept their love and commitment toward their communities alive before and after Hurricanes Irma and María (September 2017). After both storms, the organizations stepped up as the first responders to communities overwhelmed by the absence of basic services. They hit the streets, searched, improvised and executed masterfully — an unanticipated and highly necessary response, which for many represented the difference between life and death. To you, we dedicate this annual report.

Thank you.

BEFORE AND AFTER HURRICANE MARÍA...

THE YEARS 2017 and 2018 are historic for Puerto Rico. When Hurricane María made landfall on the island on Sept. 20, 2017, it marked a before and after. The entire island was in a state of vulnerability, both physically and emotionally. However, the communities, with the priceless help of the nonprofit sector, faced adversity and set forth on the path of reconstruction.

At the FCPR, we recognize those community-based and nonprofit organizations as the first responders and decided to draw up a strategic plan that would strengthen them through the growth of their community capitals: physical, financial, human, social, ecological and cultural.

Our strategic intervention focused on developing projects for access to renewable energy, drinking water, safe housing, community economic development, and education. It was also proven that in times of greatest adversity, the FCPR is strengthened thanks to the contribution of our donors in and outside of Puerto Rico.

Following is a review of these two years and the progress of our communities.

YOUR PHILANTHROPIC INVESTMENT IN PUERTO RICO

WE'RE YOUR STRATEGIC CONNECTION WITH THE CAUSES YOU'RE PASSIONATE ABOUT

FOR 34 YEARS, hundreds of donors have depended on the Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico (FCPR) as its philanthropic vehicle to make a difference on the lives of students and people assisted by nonprofit organizations that offer direct service to communities. The causes they're passionate about are diverse, but they are all moved by the desire to contribute to the island's present and future wellbeing.

They have found in the Foundation an institution that offers experience, a track record, structure, administrative and executive capacity, and guidance on the most pressing needs of our communities, achieving a greater social and financial reach.

SET UP A FUND

Individuals, families, corporations or foundations that wish to invest in the community may establish:

- Scholarship funds
- Funds to grants
- Awards
- Acknowledgments

The types of the funds are:

- Permanent fund
- Temporary fund
- Combined fund

RESOURCES YOU MAY USE TO MAKE YOUR SOCIAL INVESTMENT

In addition to making a cash donation, which is the traditional way, you may opt for other forms of investment: securities, legacies, shares (prior to sale), real estate, retirement plans, life insurance, affiliation of private foundations, and tangible personal property.

"The Foundation has strategically guided our donors' philanthropic wishes".

FONDO DE BECAS GUALASIA
CONTRIBUTE IN AN ORGANIZED, LEGAL AND STRUCTURED WAY

ESTABLISHED IN 2017

THE WORD GUALASIA does not appear in dictionaries. Its origin is extraordinary, familiar and intimate.

Gualasia is the combination of the names of Gualberto and Asia Rodríguez, a married couple from the Mameyes neighborhood in Jayuya. One of his granddaughters, Nanette Rodríguez, says that before they died, they both expressed the desire to create a foundation to support the professional growth of young people from Jayuya who showed an interest in pursuing agricultural careers. That was the seed that sprouted the Fondo de Becas Gualasia, established in 2017 at the FCPR. The love for the earth was very important to their lives.

"My grandfather was an agronomist by trade and after becoming unemployed, he established his own business, Caribbean Produce Exchange. It was a successful business that is still in operation today, creating jobs in Puerto Rico. Agriculture was extremely important for my grandfather, because it's what feeds a country," Nanette said.

Gualberto's vision was to achieve efficiencies in farming through the implementation of agricultural genetics, which is why the Fund pays special attention to the development of agricultural genetics and biotechnology.

> "Through the fund, an individual or a family is helping others reach their dreams."

> Nanette Rodríguez
> Nieta de Gualberto Rodríguez

For Nanette, the philanthropic initiative delivers a powerful message to students: they're not alone. "I want you to know that we're very happy about your decision to study agronomy and that we're here to help you, not only financially, but emotionally. Our family is very proud of the grantees because we know they're an essential part of Puerto Rico's future. We want them to aspire to greatness and understand that the effort, dedication and sacrifice are worthwhile to achieve their goals," she said.

She also said the philanthropic fund is one of the ways to help and contribute to a better Puerto Rico in an organized, legal and structured way. "Through the fund, an individual or a family is helping others reach their dreams. We also want to teach them through our example that helping is more important than receiving; and for them to help those around them when they get the chance," she said.

FONDO AMIGOS DE FAE

TO GIVE THANKS

ESTABLISHED IN 2018

The Fondo Amigos de la Facultad de Administración de Empresas (FAE) de la Universidad de Puerto Rico, Río Piedras Campus, was born from the gratitude that a group of FAE alumni has toward the institution that helped them achieve their academic and professional goals.

Certified Public Accountant and financial advisor Héctor González says that for several months a group of friends discussed how to help the FAE face its fiscal challenges as a result of government cuts to the island's main educational campus.

"The concern that moved us to get involved and seek a concrete response was born from the gratitude we have toward the university and acknowledging having had an excellent student experience, at extremely reasonable costs," Héctor says.

It was then that Agnes Suárez, Kenneth Rivera, Rafael del Valle, Zulmarie Urrutia and González developed a citizen response to the Faculty's economic problem so that it could continue carrying out its academic mission: establishing a fund in the Puerto Rico Community Foundation. "At a time when the most valuable asset is human capital, the university is undoubtedly the fundamen-

SOL PR LIMITED FUND

EMBRACED BY PHILANTHROPY

ESTABLISHED IN 2018

WHEN LAURA I. GOITÍA-RODRÍGUEZ learned about the Sol Puerto Rico Limited Fund scholarship, she was happy to know she wasn't alone in the path she set out to become a mechanical engineer. "There will always be people who will support students reach a better future," she recalls. And the economic opportunity came just in time.

After Hurricane María hit in September 2017, her father spent about four months out of work, while her mother was in the same circumstance for about two months. The new scenario complicated the family's economic situation because Laura, a resident of San Juan, had to find a dorm near the University of Puerto's Mayagüez Campus, which implied expenses not only for housing, but for food, transportation and others.

> "Philanthropy is an act every human being must undertake. In Puerto Rico, it should be practiced more often."
> Laura I. Goitía Rodríguez
> Student

So, as soon as her mother told her about the scholarship, the student in Mechanical Engineering with a minor in Automotive decided to "participate because I saw the opportunity to help my parents financially and because I want to be able to complete my schoolwork." Knowing that she was one of those chosen by the FCPR's evaluation committee, she felt peace because she could alleviate "part of the economic weight off of my parents that comes with being able to finish my studies."

Laura wants to be a mechanical engineer for two reasons: to show that women can pursue careers traditionally attributed to men and contribute to the conservation of the environment. Her interest in engineering and architecture began in seventh grade because she saw in both professions the possibility of creating and designing. But it wasn't until she participated in a mechanical engineering camp at the college where she is currently enrolled that she was convinced that this was the way to go. She also wants to contribute to the preservation of the environment by creating an engine that does not emit harmful gases, since they contribute significantly to environmental pollution.

"I saw it as a challenge because many told me it was weird to see a woman studying Mechanical Engineering. I will be one of those people who will show that gender doesn't matter, but rather dedication and effort, which will lead me to complete my courses and create a better future for planet Earth," he shared.

Laura is extremely grateful for philanthropy, she says. "Philanthropy is an act every human being must undertake. In Puerto Rico, it should be practiced more often. The college life of a student should not be affected by their economic status. Everyone deserves learning," she says.

tal axis for the economic development of the Puerto Rico we all yearn for and need," said Kenneth.

The philanthropic initiative stirred up enthusiasm among the faculty and the students, who have conducted fundraising activities to contribute to consolidating the fund.

The purpose of the fund is to provide an annual $5,000 donation to the FAE for to improve the facility's physical plant, student trips, coordination of guest professors, and participation in academic events with accredited off-island universities. This will be achieved when the fund reaches the $100,000 collection goal.

The group of friends urges others to do the same to support other departments.

RENEWABLE ENERGY

SELF-MANAGEMENT AND COMMUNITY EMPOWERMENT

THE TORO NEGRO COMMUNITY in Ciales is an example of what can be achieved with self-management, community empowerment, and philanthropic support.

After Hurricane María, the residents of this community located in a remote area of the island's mountain region spent eight months without electricity. The vulnerable situation they were in led them to begin taking steps to establish a project that would guarantee energy security.

The community organized 15 years ago, so it was confident in assuming the "responsibility" involved in executing this ambitious project. This is how the first solar community in Puerto Rico emerged, which owns and manages its own solar energy system: 20 micro-networks that provide renewable energy to 28 houses.

"We welcome this donation from the Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico and the Somos Solar Foundation with great joy and humility. We have taken on the challenge and responsibility together to build a solar energy network that will change our future and ensure a redundant energy supply... Our community effort will guarantee the success of the Toro Negro Solar Community," said José "Tito" Figueroa, president of the Toro Negro Community Inc., in a statement released in June 2018, announcing the social justice project.

After the installation of solar panels and batteries, the unique solar community embarked on the process of creating the community's administrative entity in charge of managing the system, for which they also received technical assistance and support from the FCPR. "That is the key to the success of this project (which has to be sustainable): we're going to have our own energy security in our own hands," José says.

> "We have taken on the challenge and responsibility of building a solar energy network that will change our future."
> José "Tito" Figueroa

Toro Negro caught the attention of local and U.S.-based media. It was also a finalist in the "Microgrid Greater Good Awards 2019" international competition and has had the support of Duke University in North Carolina to develop the billing system.

Toro Negro was followed by the Esperanza Village community in Juncos, a solar micro-network that provides power to nine rental residences for people with low and very low income. The FCPR's vision is to continue promoting solar communities in Puerto Rico.

Iris González Ramos, president of the Comité Comunal de Corcovada in Añasco.

BEFORE HURRICANE MARÍA, the Corcovada community in Añasco, had purchased a solar panel energy system for its community aqueduct, motivated by its vision, self-management and community empowerment. However, the Corcovada Communal Aqueduct lacked an energy storage system, so during the rainy season, when sun barely heats up and the central energy system collapses, as it happened during the emergency caused by Hurricane María, the community was unable to supply drinking water to its 600 residents. Like many other community aqueducts, the lack of electricity forced them to invest in power generators, which isn't cost-effective and harms the environment.

So, the community, jointly with Máximo Solar and Fundación Somos Solar, presented a project to the Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico (FCPR) to be able to buy a battery system in which they would also invest. "The institutions are there to help us, but we have to take our steps," said Iris González-Ramos, president of the Corcovada Community Committee in Añasco.

After 40 years history, Corcovada has been able to strengthen its vision and community organization, guided by a common goal: the full well-being of its residents. In 2006 they were bestowed the Miranda Foundation Solidarity Award; and in 2001 they received recognition from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOOA) for the administration of the Non-PRASA system. The community also has a convention center, a recreational area with a basketball court, a baseball park, and a playground for children. In addition, they have a multipurpose center, located in an old school building and that has a gym and computer rooms. They offer English classes, health fairs and other activities there.

"Corcovada is an example of community resilience. In addition, there are a number of lessons learned that we must gather from this community to continue strengthening the island's community aqueducts, so that they continue to provide fair access to water in other communities in Puerto Rico," says FCPR's president, Nelson I. Colon-Tarrats.

STRATEGY

A focus on administration, infrastructure, organization and compliance with the water quality of community aqueducts, which are independent from the government's drinking water system and run by community organizations.

"The institutions are there to help us, but we have to take our steps."

SAFE HOUSING

A VARIED RESPONSE TO AN URGENT NEED

REBUILDING homes destroyed by Hurricanes Irma and María became a priority for Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico (FCPR). The vulnerability that affected hundreds of families without a safe roof required immediate action. In response, the Foundation supported the reconstruction of homes through the Community Housing Development Organizations (CHDOs).

The strategic approach was two-pronged: supporting the reconstruction of houses in the municipality of Loíza and home repairs in 15 island towns. The strategy also included relocating families, transferring repossessed houses and technical assistance to CHDO's.

In the summer of 2018, the FCPR awarded $1.3 million to several CHDO's to repair 79 homes. In addition, it granted another $800,000 donation to the Puerto Rico Institute for Socio-Economic and Housing Development (INDESOVI, in Spanish) to rebuild 30 residences in Loíza, where it had partnered with the Ricky Martin Foundation for this effort.

Loíza is among the poorest municipalities in Puerto Rico and more than 1,000 housing units were affected by the impact of both hurricanes. Among that sea of individuals, was Wanda Fuentes, a 51-year-old woman, a resident of the Medianía Baja, Honduras sector in Loíza. Hurricane Maria destroyed her home's roof.

She lost everything. The wood and zinc house that until then had been her home, was now only a memory. She, along with her son and husband — a dialysis patient — were left homeless. Since then, her family lived in three temporary homes over the course of a year. "I cried every day. I lost a lot. My husband was depressed," she remembers.

The new home had to be stronger. Wanda received assistance from FEMA and used her own money, including a loan, but it was not enough. It was then that philanthropic support made a difference: the assistance granted by both foundations allowed Wanda to complete the reconstruction, specifically, issues related to the hooking up the electricity, installing the floor and labor costs.

"I'm very grateful. They were angels who came to Loíza. I managed to move to my new house thanks to the foundations. I remember the day they gave me the key; It was a very special day; I cried a lot. I had never received help from foundations until then," she recalls.

"WE FEEL A LOT OF HOPE AND RELIEF..."

A LITTLE BEFORE the passage of Hurricane María, the Semillas Incubator of Casa Sin Fronteras was starting a microenterprise incubation cycle with 25 participants. But the atmospheric phenomenon brought everything to a halt...indefinitely. When the organization finally managed to regroup, they resumed communication with the participants, but only found seven of them. The ravages of the hurricane had forced some to leave the island, while others were surviving, pushing away the possibility of starting a business at the time.

"The devastation was evident, but the drive and desire to overcome us was also immediately evident... We discovered a poor and fragile Puerto Rico, but at the same time full of dignity and hope," says Ángel Cortés, executive director of the Semillas Incubator. It was with that scant seven people that the cycle continued. "Now more than ever!" they told Angel, as he recalls.

The value of community and solidarity incubators, and their consequent boost to the development of microenterprises, is that they are a strategy to fight poverty. "The solidarity economics represents a model to create opportunities for those that have no access and control of large capital funds, may use their talent (work) as the main tool to start initiatives that generate wealth that's accessible to the poorest."

With much "economic sacrifice," Semilla Incubator managed to complete that first incubation cycle. "Our community economic development initiatives and activities aren't always understood by the government and foundations. However, there are many participants who find in our services an opportunity to restart, to reinvent themselves, which means betting on themselves again with hope, in favor of new opportunities. Without entities such as the FCPR, which with vision and strategy provide economic resources to our incubators, our work would be practically impossible," he says.

The proposal supported by the FCPR allowed Semilla to execute two microenterprise incubation cycles. As it reached the third stage of one of the two, the incubator has managed to complete about 15 business plans, with some micro companies in operations or on their way to launching.

COMMUNITY INVESTMENT FUND

GROWTH IN FINANCIAL INVESTMENTS IN COMMUNITIES

THE COMMUNITY INVESTMENT FUND (FIC, IN SPANISH) of the Fundación Comunitaria de Puerto Rico (FCPR) granted $290,000 in loans in 2017 to two nonprofit organizations (NPOs). In 2018, the amount granted stood at $992,219 in loans to four organizations, for a combined social investment in both years of $1,282,219.

The FCPR established the FIC in 2016, as an innovative financing program that provides access to capital to NPOs to activate community economic development. Eligible activities include: capitalizing community loan programs; buying and rehabilitating social interest housing; obtaining operational capital; and, financing projects that generate economic and social results.

The instrument is similar to funds created in the U.S. mainland by community foundations, through self-funding. The FCPR made a first injection of $500,000 and was followed by other investors: Ángel Ramos Foundation; Banco Popular; Scotiabank; First Bank; Oriental Bank; and Banco Santander (2016-2018).

The FIC represents a unique opportunity for nonprofits, since interest rates are low, repayment terms are easy, and the entity is provided with financial and administrative advice, and support to control the risk.

"The FIC has been an innovative instrument for nonprofit organizations to gain access to financial capital. This serves several goals: the generation of economic activity through jobs created and retained, and suppliers that are commissioned; it gives organizations and investors a vehicle to obtain a financial return; and it provides results for the community through the services and programs the organizations offer," said Vice President of Program and Administration, David Haddock.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

INTEGRATED TRANSFORMATION: BUILDING A NEW LOÍZA

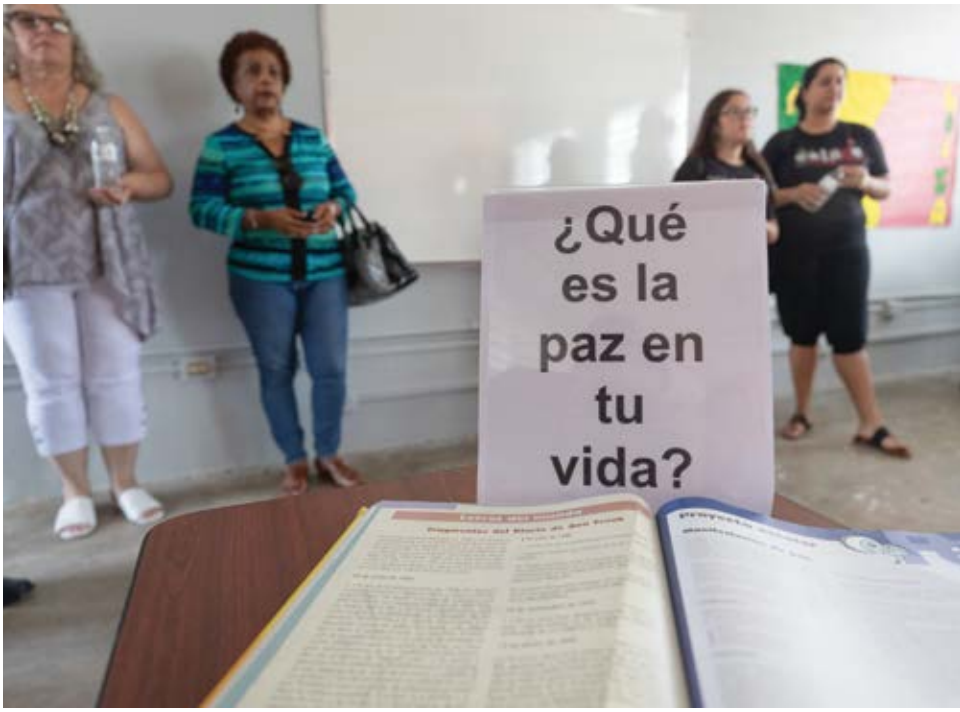

FUNDACIÓN COMUNITARIA DE PUERTO RICO (FCPR) is carrying out a comprehensive community development strategy in the town of Loíza. With the support of philanthropic, nonprofit entities, the Municipality and the community itself, the Foundation collaborates in solving problems related to access to safe housing, education, emotional health, employment opportunities and violence. "The Loíza case is very particular because of its socioeconomic composition, its history, its culture, and because it has been a community that shows the highest degree of economic and social vulnerability," says FCPR President Dr. Nelson I. Colon-Tarrats. "We want to see a significant change in Loíza's communities, so they can move forward on their own toward a better future," he adds.

The Alliance for Peace: For A New Loíza brings together the FCPR, Nuestra Escuela, Taller Salud, and the Municipality of Loíza to transform the lives of young people of African descent.

Alliance for Peace: For A New Loíza is a social justice project of the FCPR, under the Obama Foundation's My Brother's Keeper Community Challenge initiative. The alliance brings together the FCPR, Nuestra Escuela, Taller Salud, and the Municipality of Loíza to transform the lives of young people of African descent through an end to violence, negotiation and mentoring, and access to educational and job opportunities. The beneficiaries are between 15 and 30 years old.

The philanthropic approach in Loíza responds to the fact that it is a community with a high degree of economic and social vulnerability.

PROMOTING COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

W.K. KELLOGG FOUNDATION

The support granted by W.K. Kellogg Foundation to the Loíza communities through the FCPR allows executing a strategy that seeks to promote community activation to ensure that students receive emotional and academic support, while families receive emotional support and skills to create a safe environment for their children's self-sufficiency and personal development.

In addition, the philanthropic support seeks for families to have safe housing and economic stability. At the end of the road, the aim is to ensure that children and young people, together with their families, have the same opportunities to thrive after gaining access to basic social and economic resources.

Project Completion: May 2021
